A lack in South African Education.

In its native question South Africa is faced with a difficult and perplexing problem. So far as we are aware there is no analogous historical precedent from which its solution can be confidently predicted...

That the problem will not be finally solved in our day is perfectly evident, unless through some Divine intervention hastening the answer to the often repeated petition—Thy Kingdom come!

Surely South Africa should be preparing its rising generation of both races to meet this unsolved problem: yet in the whole course of our wide educational curriculum no place is found for such definite teaching as should fit our boys and girls to face and solve intelligently and wisely and righteously the problem as it is likely to confront them when they step into the front ranks.
