ATB 274 "On the Zulus' western side, over by the esiPezi mount, dwelt the clan of the aba-kwa-Koza (of Bayisa)

Conquered by Shaka sometime between 1820-26 when the clan was under Mbiwa Under an 'inferor' son much of ^{Dasicana} the tribe went north and joined with the hordes of Mzilikazi, Nxaba, or Soshangane.

Another son (the heir, Maqwebelende was killed, and another son, a ^{Ngoza} child, and full brother to the heir, was adopted by Lukwazi of the Ntombela The Koza who remained became to be headed by ^{Sikonyana} by Nqungqulu when he found favour in Shaka's army.

Ngoza later murdered by Sikonyana (in collaberation with Cetshwayo?) His son and tribal heir Mganu still living in 1914

But pre-eminence in the clan remained with Sikonyana. In later years he dwelt with the Biyela near Eshowe. He supportee Mpande in His revolt against Dingane, and was afterwards appointed by the former a district headman near Eshowe. Ther he died in 1874, leaving as heir Mfokazi married to Mpande's daughter, Popaza, unblessed with issue. To supply for the deficiency, a daughter of Mgebisa, son of Yoko, of the Makoba clan, was affiliated to Popoza's house, and bore a boy, Mehlwana. When in 1877 Mfokazi died, Mehlwana became the family heir, and married a daughter of Cetshwayo. During Mehlwana's minority the regncy was held by Ntshingwayo

ZA79 Father: Maholo. Age: 68. Residence near the Ntabankulu mountain. Remarks: Second Minister in Zululand. Has about 1500 men Second in command of the Qika zi military kraal. Is a great friend of Mnyamane's, and would probably follow his lead. He has however until lately always been held in more or less suspicion by the King, as being the officer who was sent down by Umpande with the Isanqu regiment to the Battle of the Tugela, it was said to assist Umbalawi. He is a warlike man, and is said to be very cruel. Second in command at Sandhlwana and in command at Kambula.
