Our Ohladhla tribe is an off-shoot of the amambata tribe. There were never amakosi (independent) in our section, which went to live under Zihlanhlo ka Gewabe of the amambata tribe. The ubukosi was with the amambata.

Fight between Ngobamakosi & Julwana - Ondini.

This fight took place when the city was destroyed. This was the 6th war. It was in Dec. 1877 or Jan 1878.

Ndabazwe says he was present with the Ngobamakosi at Ondini when it fought with Julwana. The trouble arose out of the izinduna of Julwana and Ngobamakosi disputing as to the relative strength & power of the two. They were ngasemla isigodho having beer. ka ngengelele (but he zi), ka ngengelele (but he zi), ka ngengelele (but he zi), ka ngengelele (but he zi). One said to the other, elam ibanushla li nga le hlul' elako. Da se be pikisan' izinkani. Sigwelele said, Yala ke uya bon'ama-but' i se puma-ke. Orders then came for Julwana to move out (by gate). They did so, & continued doing so until the icibay' esikeula had to pass through, when the ichala of Ngobamakosi (i.e. Uva) disputed the rait with them. Fighting then occurred. Julwana then went back & reported to Stama, who was still stikama who in the kraal, what had occurred, upon which he said, 'tatan' inkonto ni ba qaza! Ngobamakosi abalafana be kwela peru kwetupa yi hlom' inkonto, i ba qaza, ngobabe tel' impakla, ye nkosi (ingubula) nge gaze, hura kucenze

This has been caused by the king, who has showed them in with us, wherever it is, we who live with the king. You put 'inkosi, itab' abafana iba tele, peru kwetupa, kanti itina & ri hlala ne nkosi. They then armed & quarrelled at us, chasing us away, & killing very many. We ran away, for it was impossible to arm with assegais, seeing Julwana was in possession of the Urdi kraal where our assegais were. We too had been occupying huts belonging to Julwana. Moreover, Julwana hlabad' hikel' ireubo. Wo ye ye ye i: Ketan' amagala! Ho! hoho! wo ye wo ye i. Ketan' amagala! When they sang this, they were advancing towards us. We then ran off to the foot of the hills viz. the Sitshuri. Julwana advanced in two imeyela. We then went towards them. This was before we knew they had assegais. No sooner did we clash & find akuti ba ri pete ngemkonto, than we broke & ran. We went to house of a whiteman called 'Qomakufa, to take refuge there, but he shut the door & refused admittance. We then ran up Sitshuri abantu se be ziggingane ie coppers all about. The time then was sunset. We then turned on them when they retired back to Urdi, ba caught them at Ntubwini; many of us succeeded in snatching their assegais & stabbing them with those so obtained. The pursuit was continued until they reached the kraal & entered their huts. They would fight them. shut the doors.

After this we left the kraal & ~~went~~ went to Gqikazi before Europeans took over country, Natives Zulus used to go and seize cattle from one another. My father ^{was at} a kraal near Halambu stream, belongg to Ntombela when a raiding party from the south side of the Tugela ^(Natal) men killed a man there, others ran, & he came off with the cattle. People came to seize cattle, my father killed one of their number, which caused the others to run, leaving behind the cattle they were driving off. Cattle raiding became common when Zulu Tugela formed boundary as between two countries, ie. after Inkomo fled to Natal - formerly there was no thieving as Natal & Zululand were all one country. But Kamisile forgets Gezewa's case, which occurred in Tshaka's day.

Line 5. The meaning probably is that hats were supposed to be getukile because Tugela became boundary between Zululand & Natal, & so divided hats of the same people, some being on one side, others on the other. Thus the hats being cut off, were getukile.

Ngobamakhosi was present at this action. Zibebu arrived with his forces at uluNdi before day-break. His coming was observed by the iNdlavela regt (consisting of 3000) and stationed there by Mswazi, the Swazi King). Mkhosi was hlatswazi. The Ingobamakhosi were ordered into the isibaya by to go to the King. The izinduna objected, saying, 'What is the use of going to the King with the enemy at our very doors?' Hence it was that Ngobamakhosi and Kandempemore were sent out in two divisions to meet the enemy. Kandempemore were repulsed which soon led to the defeat of Ngobamakhosi. When repulsed, the regt wanted to get to the King, but it was ascertained the King had left and made off towards the Ntshwini stream, & from thence to the Umfolozi.

In the meantime, Zibebu pressed his attack on uNdi, then held by Tulewana. The kraal was surrounded and entered. A fierce conflict occurred with the Tulewana, who were completely wiped out, leaving Zibebu master of the situation.

The ngobamakosi & kandempemvu were chased across the mfolorzi and dispersed.

Kamisile + Ndabazwe

Dinuzulu's Life, & end of Cetshwayo's

Kamisile states: I do not know Di's mother's maiden name; Her father was Maveli. She was intombazana ya nga kwaba ambuyazi - ngo wa sesigodhlwani. Cetshwayo's nkorikazi was a Infumuta ka Qetuka ka Mangondo, wa kwa maparaza. Infumuta is still living. She married Siswana ka Mtuyagwa ka Dibi ka Menziwa. Siswana is now dead, before she he died,

+ made a chief (61)

Manzolewandhle was given land, she then left Siswana to live with her son Manzolewandhle. She is still living with him.

Dinuzulu's mother was of Isitemana regiment. Dinuzulu was born at the first Undi kraal, then kwa Dhlaza ngubo, i.e. at that part of the ridge which is about five miles from O'Ngoye - this kraal was not far below Hangela kraal.

Ndabazwe says he saw Dinuzulu when at the later Undi Kraal, Emahlabatini.

When Zulu was occurred, Dinuzulu was Emahlabatini, at O'Ndini. He escaped from Undi with his father, though the latter separated from him, going to Ingome forest, where he was afterwards captured. Dinuzulu went to take refuge with Zibebwe when C.

was captured, he was brought to the Umfolozi where the troops were, and asked where his children were and what he wanted done with them. Cetshwayo said he wanted Zibebwe to look after them, including Dinuzulu.

Upon this, the authorities set apart a lot of cattle and handed them over to Zibebwe, they were for feeding Dinuzulu & his mother.

Zibebwe then rode off on horseback towards Bangenomo with Dinuzulu. Ndabuko & his other Umtata heads followed on foot. After going a little way, Ndabuko declared that they would not consent to eat off the dishes (izitsha) of the house of Sojigisa. A message was accordingly sent by Ndabuko to Zibebwe to say

Ndabazwe says Isitemana + yet he & Kamisile are of the same (Dhlaza) tribe

he was a youth 16-20 years and afterwards for mpande - uya ngi gale ... I don't know to what nokondo is, but it is associated with provocation.

Was it his wish that the induna mpyamane should take them done with them. Cetshwayo said he wanted Zibebwe to look after them, including Dinuzulu. Upon this, the authorities set apart a lot of cattle and handed them over to Zibebwe, they were for feeding Dinuzulu & his mother.

Zibebwe, Makigana, mpyamane

Sojigisa (67) was accordingly sent by Ndabuko to Zibebwe to say

Kwa so ka Suku' Uteutuwa lo Khehwa

^{midhlanhlan} Dimezulu & the women were to come to them, ^{also the cattle} as also the cattle that had been ~~seized~~. When Zibebu heard this, he was greatly surprised & desired to oppose to complying with the ^{rest of C's family} ~~order~~, seeing he had been nominated Guardian of Dimezulu by Cetchwayo himself in the presence of the white authorities ^{with consent}. He called a big council of his men who, after full discussion, advised him to accede to Ndabuko's wish. He did so, but refused to surrender the cattle. All he did, when sending Dimezulu back, was to send along with him ^{food for journey} two oxen, ^{to work for you, he has no beef} the rest of the cattle he kept. The Ucutu demanded the cattle, but Zibebu would not yield. Repressions now followed. Crops of umabele belonging to Mandhla Kazi people ~~was~~ were cut down (i.e. the ears of corn) by Ucutu party, and they presently took to seizing cattle belonging to followers of Zibebu, by way of recompensing themselves for the cattle Zibebu had refused to give up. Zibebu retaliated, fighting took place, though at first only small parties were engaged. These disturbances became more & more serious; the Ucutu ^{induced many others} got more ~~men~~ to join their party, & Zibebu did likewise. A pitched battle was then fought at Umsebe, resulting in a complete & crushing defeat of the Ucutu party. ⁶⁸ It was shortly after this action that Cetchwayo was brought back from captivity.

He was returned by Sousewu & brought into Janeney. The Zulu heads were called to meet him. Ndabuko & many Ucutu's failed to come because, having just been severely punished by Zibebu, they were afraid of venturing into the open, for many had taken to the bushes. Nor would Zibebu, though he obeyed the summons to be present, & agree to meet & speak to Cetchwayo.

Sousewu then declared the conditions under which C. was being restored to Zululand, viz that Cetch. was to live ^{believed} ~~within~~ the Mhlalozzi, ^{and white! mhlalozzi were} which ~~was~~ to be his new boundary & within which he was to try cases, not kill off indiscriminately & refrain from recruiting recruits. ^{Believed} ^{Speech of} ^{Ukhulupeki} ^{zi ka Ndabuko} ^{white!} ^{was to live} ^{near} ^{at} ^{North of} ^{black} ^{Um.} was to be Zibebu's territory. Fynn was appointed to watch the position & keep an eye on Cetchwayo. ^{The plan was that C. was to be assisted by 500 of his own choice} ^{withdrewn} ^{than} ^{C.} ^{determined} ^{to} ^{disregard} ^{the} ^{orders.} - he ^{deliberately} infringed the terms of settlement by marching across Umhlalozzi & White Mhlalozzi and re-erecting the Ucutu kraal on a site quite close to the Ucutu kraal that had been the scene of the final action in the Zulu war. ⁷² ^{My informant} Ndabazwe assisted in this reconstruction of the kraal. ^{This happened a few weeks after the Mhlalozzi's departure} It was here then that C. lived in defiance of the Govt, & Dimezulu lived there with him. He lived there (says Ndabazwe) for about 2 months when Zibebu attacked him.

One day not long after ^[King D. X. 1827 "setways" - says a week] Zibebu made a night march on Urdi and attacked it in the manner already fully described by Ntabazwe ^{on p. 1-5}, this man having been engaged in that action. C. succeeded in escaping with Druuzulu & though wounded, succeeded in taking refuge in ^{the} Mkaushla forest. Here he remained until fetched by Dyma to Esowe. Druuzulu remained with Ndabuko at Mkaushla. When C. was at Esowe, a Natusolicem ^{Tomuka Mampanga} in command of a force of police & messengers, backed up by those from south of Mhlaleni, who were loyal to the Govt, was posted Esikaleni se Dovu, near Robertson's (Nzimla's) mission St. with orders ^{from the Govt} to prevent those in Reserve territory going across to join C. He was told to ^{seize} the cattle of those who did so. He carried out these orders to a considerable extent. He seized cattle & arrested disaffected people, bringing them to the authorities. After a while the Usutu party issued forth from Mkaushla & ^{surprised} attacked Tomu and his men in force. It seems the latter regarded the attacking force as being friendly, but they killed them off, including Tomu ^{himself}, & seized the cattle he had been collecting from people loyal to the Usutu cause.

* Druuzulu saved by Sitchihili. Stuart ^{History of the Zululand} July 1852

The next step was that Druuzulu sought the help of the Boers against Zibebu. The help was given in a severe action in which very many of Zibebu's party were killed was fought at Ishanini ^{[5/29 June 1853] - see Stuart H. Zululand Feb. 15 1852}, Zibebu was completely defeated. Ifayey Kaniile said this Ishanini action was fought after the death of C. at Esowe in 1854.
